A RECENT HISTORY OF EPIC FAILURE
HOW NOT TO DO SECURITY

Security Wisdom in an Unwise World

Security is preparation. Security is resilience. Security is learning. Learning to identify potential vulnerabilities, new attack vectors, and how to respond when IT hits the fan.

Learning from minor mistakes rarely results in real improvement, however. To make truly deep changes, it takes failures. Really big failures. The sort of epic mistakes that cause news crews to camp on your steps and summon your CEO to a Senate inquiry.

As a crisis unfolds, the role of security changes rapidly. Our ability to understand the damage is impaired. We make stupid decisions. Even dangerous decisions. Decisions that can escalate a minor incident into a major disaster.

Come listen as veteran security expert Eric Karshiev analyzes the role security played in some of the nastiest mistakes in recent history, from Chernobyl to 'EternalBlue'.

Discuss practical security. How to build a resilient architecture in a world of intelligent, evolving, stealth malware. Additionally, we will cover issues such as business risks, the threat of massive DDoS attacks from unsecured IoT devices, and the zen of security.
